Asia-Pacific region is generating increased attention from academic, business and policy-making circles alike. Asia-Pacific Crossroads provides a novel theoretical approach to examine the interplay of economic, political, and security factors in APEC's evolution. It focuses on the likelihood for APEC to become smoothly "nested" within the World Trade Organization and considers how subregional groupings in the Asia-Pacific might in turn become nested within APEC. It offers the first rigorous and systematic theoretical and empirical examination of the APEC forum by a multinational, interdisciplinary group of scholars.

© St. Martin's Press

Review

"This edited volume offers a wide-ranging coverage of APEC as an institution, its evolution and development, and gives valuable detail of how APEC has dealt with various economic relations issues in the region. The contributors are experts in their fields and the standard is high . . . a valuable source for those studying and analyzing Asian economic affairs and for understanding an important institutional aspect of Asia Pacific development."

Stuart Harris
Australian National University
Journal of Asian Studies

"The authors of this volume endeavour to deal with the complex issue of the linkage between Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) and the multilateral and regional arrangements in which its members are involved . . . Some of the authors contributing to this volume have recognized the diversity of the APEC/European mix and the need to accommodate the varied interests of developing economies in the WTO of the future . . ."

Edward English
Carleton University
Pacific Affairs

"...useful reading to both experts and newcomers..."

C. Fred Bersten, Director
Institute for International Economics

"...salient reading for those who care about America's future in the world's most dynamic region."

Winston Lord
former Assistant Secretary of State for the Asia-Pacific
Featured Upcoming Events

Noon Seminar Series: Parents' labor force participation and children’s involvement in work activities: Evidence from Thailand

International Symposium: “Fostering Innovation and Developing Partnership for Blue Economy”

Business Perspectives of US-Japan-Southeast Asia Economic Relations

Illustrated Talk: "45 Years as a Puppeteer"

2019 EWC-KIPF Conference on Inclusive Growth and Fiscal Policy

Noon Seminar Series: Declining Demographics and South Korean National Security

Noon Seminar Series: Ocean Conservation in a Changing Climate

More Events

EWC Arts

EWC Arts Program Upcoming Performance:
Chunhajeil Tal Gongjakso (The Greatest Masque)
Mask Dances from Korea
Sunday, February 17, 2019

Orvis Auditorium, UH Mānoa
Tickets: https://ewcarts.eventbrite.com

Featured Publications

India’s Relations with ASEAN: Posture Versus Reality
Vibhanshu Shekhar
The Asia Pacific region is now at a critical juncture as regards building its regional architecture for the future. Currently, the regional community and its institutional architecture are a "work in progress," gradually taking shape. Starting from the 1960s, there were a few stumbling attempts to construct some sort of formal regional community, but all have failed. In the first decade after the Cold War, regional community building was largely driven by the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) dialogues. 10 Vinod K. Aggarwal and Charles E. Morrison, eds., Asia–Pacific Crossroads: Regime Creation and the Future of APEC (New York: St Martin's, 1998). 11 Youngmin Kwon, Regional Community Building in East Asia (Seoul: Yonsei University Press, 2002), p. 29.