Socio-spatial interactions such as transnational human mobilities and social engagement are the centerpiece of forming and transforming existing political, economic, cultural, religious, and social spaces and boundaries, and identities. As our global network society is about constant mobilities of everything that transcends nation-state borders, cross-border interactions and integration is a key issue towards balanced and sustainable socio-spatial cohesion, especially within the EU. However, not much is known about the rapidly increasing cross-border daily mobilities which is one underlying fo
